Plus all those beautiful plants!

Poinsettias are synonymous with Christmas and look great for months on end. They prefer minimal watering.

Gorgeous glossy Anthuriums come in bright red, white, green and pink shades. Their thick shiny spathes are tough and long lasting.

Peace lilies (Spathiphyllum) are the most forgiving of houseplants, tolerant of low light. The foliage is lush and green and the elegant white flowers last for months on end.

Glamorous moth orchids (Phalaenopsis) are extremely long flowering and easy to care for.

Classic hydrangeas look wonderful in big pots. Modern compact varieties are especially bred for pots.

Bromeliads add a tropical air. They're grown outdoors in warm climates, but also make great container plants, indoors or out.

No-fuss roses make a great gift for anyone who loves roses but doesn't want to go to any bother. In eight colours, 'Flower Carpet' roses are well known for their disease resistance and prolific flowering. Look out for this season's stunning 'Flower Carpet Amber' and also the newly released 'Towne and Country' roses.

Native plants also look fantastic in containers. Consider colourful flaxes, silver Astelias, spiky Libertia (NZ iris) and soft grasses. Pretty in grey-green or bronze, corokias look great clipped into shapes. Poor Knights Lily (Xeronema) is an outstanding container plant that lasts for decades, getting better and better with age.

A simple bunch of flowers will give days of pleasure, but if you're after something that lasts much longer, try a beautiful living plant.
